Taking U.S. Military children living in three different countries to a fourth country for service and learning is a challenge requiring lots of advance planning and attention to detail. To ensure the success of this summer's Youth of the Chapel Service Project, the IMCOM-Europe Religious Support Office used their expertise to ensure that all project staff, including contractors and volunteers, were vetted and that all force protection measures were in place before the buses rolled out to Ostrava, Czech Republic. These behind the scenes efforts were instrumental in the overall success of the program that built school playground equipment and multi-national relationships between military children and their peers in another country.
